In November of 2025, I had the privilege of traveling to Portugal. On my first day in the country, I wandered through the streets of Lisbon, enchanted by a city filled with colorful, artistic tiles. I went on to a meeting in Albufeira, where I met incredible people from around the world who are working to end poverty in their communities.

Every story these new friends shared was a tale of what is possible when we work together to create change, to make the lives of those we love more beautiful. No individual took credit for their accomplishments alone. There were no stories of heroes overcoming obstacles all by themselves. Progress was only possible through the collaborative care and effort of many.

I was marinating in this idea when I spent one last evening in Lisbon on my way home. I wandered down the streets again, but I saw the tiles differently this time. I saw how their patterns were only possible in proximity to one another, and how the real scope of their beauty was found in seeing them all together as parts of a whole.

Nature teaches us about this interdependence, reciprocity, and vital connection every day of the year. And it was all these thoughts together that inspired this calendar. I invite you to make it your own by coloring in the tiles in a way that pleases you.

I am so fortunate to have you as part of the whole of my life. I look forward to opportunities to create good things together in the new year.

With love,
Jenna
